Faculty Search Committee Briefings

"Diversity is a core value of UCLA. It enables us to provide the kind of broad, enriching educational experience for which the university has long been known."

Because we are a public institution, our students, faculty and staff must reflect the broad diversity of the state of California. We take great pride in the many backgrounds represented on our campus. UCLA has a great legacy of preparing leaders from all segments of society who have gone on to make significant contributions all over the world.

We are deeply committed to ensuring the continued diversity of our campus. We will do whatever we can, legally and appropriately, to preserve and expand the diverse nature of our university community."

- Chancellor Gene D. Block

What Every Search Committee Needs to Know:

The Process: Search Committee Checklist
Research Findings: Recruiting, Interviewing and Evaluating Candidates
Practices: Enabling Equity

Who Should Attend:

It is recommended that every faculty member attend a Faculty Search Briefing, since each faculty member participates in the search and selection process for faculty positions. These briefings are especially helpful for faculty members serving as Search Committee Chairs or members. Each department conducting a faculty search should have members of the Search Committee certified in the search process.
